

Master of Public Health (online)

MPH

The Course

This MPH Master of Public Health course combines the work of public health theory, practice and research, with expertise from: Life and Medical Science, Nursing and Social Work and The Business School at the University of Hertfordshire.

The range of optional modules offered and the breadth of cases used across the programme will provide opportunities for specialism in the global and local context.

Modules

To see the modules you will be studying, please visit the course page go.herts.ac.uk/MPHonline

Why do this course?

Public Health as a means of preventing ill health and promoting well-being is increasingly taking a key role in society. Such a topical area in health currently, you can ensure your skills are up to date with an online MPH Master of Public Health degree.

We have tailored this online course towards the needs of diverse health professionals including doctors, pharmacists, nurses, and allied health, social care and environmental health professionals, plus the wider public health workforce in the non-governmental sector. It also supports managerial, policy and practitioner career pathways.

Benefit from:

- Wide variety of specialist modules
- Two start dates: January or September
- 100% online, part time study
- A wealth of teaching expertise - take a look at the staff teaching profiles online

Career opportunities

This programme is designed for students who wish to develop their careers in the field of public health practice, management or research, as well as practitioners and managers already in the field, who wish to enhance their career development.

The online MPH course is tailored implicitly towards the needs of diverse health professionals including doctors, pharmacists, nurses, and allied health, social care and environmental health professionals, as well as the wider public health workforce in the non-governmental sector.

The programme supports managerial, policy and practitioner career pathways.

Find out more, visit: go.herts.ac.uk/MPHonline

School of Life and Medical Sciences

Course length:

Full-time: 1 year (September start only)

Part-time: 2 years (September and January start)

Start date:

January and September

Entry requirements:

For entry requirements, please visit the course page

go.herts.ac.uk/MPHonline

Course fees:

For current course fees, please visit the course page

go.herts.ac.uk/MPHonline

Flexible payment options offered.

How to apply:

Visit: go.herts.ac.uk/uhonlineapply

Any questions?

E: askuhonline@herts.ac.uk

T: +44 (0) 1707 281121

“ This course has enhanced my understanding of the clinical, economic, political, ethical and social issues associated with public health in the UK.”

Mark Kane

UK
UH Online